Geomembrane.com Updated

Environmental Protection, Inc. has recently overhauled and updated our website at www.geomembrane.com. Dan Rohe, webmaster for EPI, has provided the site with a new look and a new layout. The goal is to provide an easy to navigate site that provides the information engineers and customers are asking for, in a logical manner.

in our website and the type and style of information available. Our site has always been text based for easy searching and free to anyone who is looking for information on PVC liner and other geomembranes.

The first EPI SpecFile.CD was introduced at Geo99 in Boston. It was the first CD in the geo industry to provide information to engineer's right on their desk top without the necessity of a high speed internet connection.

EPI launched geomembrane.com in 1997. This initial website has been steadily upgraded under the guidance of Dan Rohe, and boasts the continuous addition of new and pertinent information. You can view the progression by clicking the year here to see the changes over the decade: 1997, 1998, 2000, 2002, 2003, 2005, 2006, 2007. If you have any questions or need information, just give us a call toll free at 800-OK-LINER.

Previously EPI has won awards for its website design. EPI is no stranger to the internet. Our first website was available through America Online back in 1992. Text based, it provided access to the first EPI SpecFile disk. It could be ordered online and provided 144k of specification information and installation details. It was amazing stuff back then. With the explosive growth of the internet also came change
